Also earning golds for the Pacers were: Darcy Grant in the 50-meter electric wheelchair slalom, Eddie Capps in the running long jump, Curt Byle in the ball throw, Craig Wagenknecht in the 100, Measha Porter in the 100 and Becky Santos in the 200.

In addition to the golds, those earning other medals were: Byle with a bronze in the 100, Wagenknecht with a silver in the 400, and Christine Morgan with a silver in the ball throw.

Lisa and Becky Santos, Wagenknecht and Byle were members of a silver-medal-winning 400 relay team.

Biggs, Hill, Marczewski named most inspirational

Ronna Biggs, Jay Hill and Bill Marczewski were named most inspirational members of their teams during the spring sports awards assembly at Ilwaco High School last week.

Biggs, a sophomore, competed both as a middle distance runner and a shot putter and discus thrower for the girls' track team. Her award was voted on—as was the most improved trophy—by her teammates.

Sophomore Julie Clearman, whose specialty was the 400-meter dash, was named most improved. State participant Nita Andrews, a junior, gained MVP honors as the person who collected the most points over the season.

"Our team this season was built around primarily sophomores and freshmen," said Ilwaco coach Lynette Wiegardt. "We showed a lot of spirit but found some room for improvement."

Wiegardt also recognized April Lang and Terri Ray as scorekeepers for both the boys' and girls' track teams over the year. She also noted that Andrews is the first non-runner to receive MVP status.

The MVP for the golf team, the person who had the lowest average score over the season, was Tony McGuire, the only senior member of a team which finished second for the Far West dual meet season.

Head coach John Green and assistant Chuck Keith handed out the golf awards.

Hill, a junior, was named most inspirational, while Cary Bloom, a freshman, was most improved. Bloom scored hole-in-one during a practice round at Surfside Golf Course. He has only been playing golf two months.

Marczewski, a sophomore, took home most inspirational kudos for the boys' track team.

"He (Marczewski) stuck it out the entire season even though, as an underclassman, he knew his chances of placing were not very good most of the time," said coach Joe Williams. "He was an inspiration to everyone with his hard work and determination."

Lonnie Williams, the lone boys' state competitor, was the team's MVP. Williams is a senior.

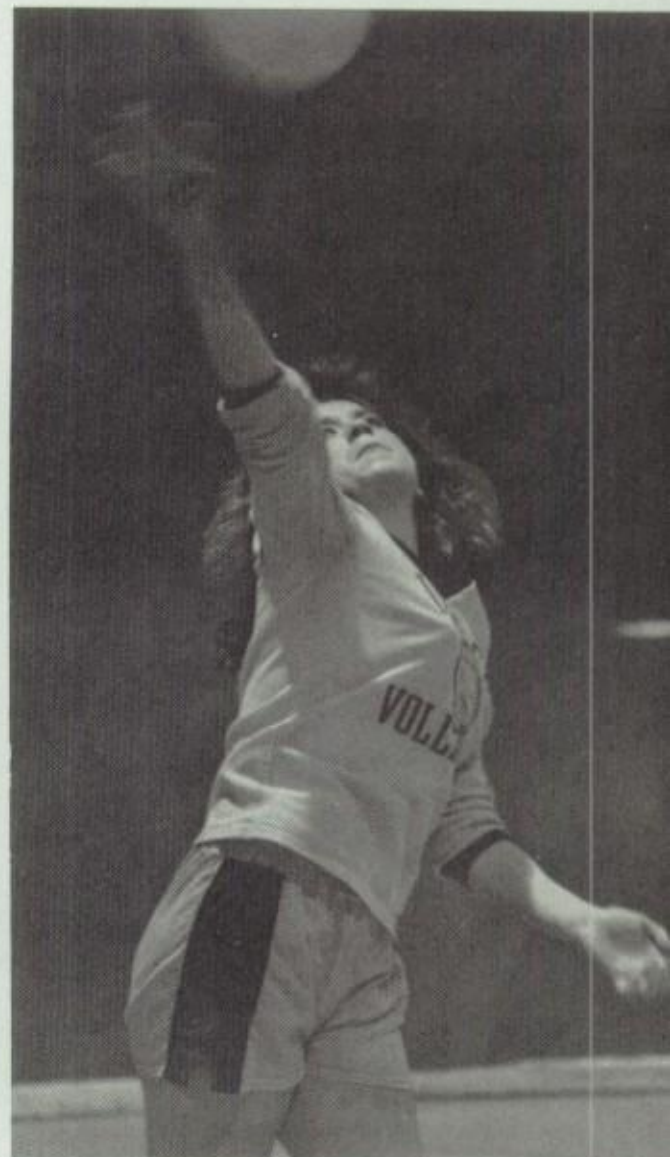

Most-improved honors were shared by freshman Bob Byrd and junior Stefen Malchow, who turned out for track for the first time since he was a seventh grader.

Byrd appeared to be well on his way to a district berth in the javelin and/or shot put when he broke his thumb playing basketball. Malchow qualified for district in both the high and long jumps.

Coach Williams also noted the efforts of distance runner Luke Falk and pole vaulter Kris Williams, both of whom qualified for district. Falk finished sixth in both district 1600- and 3200- meter runs.

Stand by me

By DONNA AASE
Class valedictorian

At a small school such as Ilwaco High, it's much easier for students to get to know each other. Many of us in this class have known each other since we started going to school in that big pink prison on top of the hill.

Throughout the years, cliques have formed and reformed. New faces have come and familiar ones have moved away.

Amazingly enough, we have made it through high school and we are still together. As classmates, we have stood together at various sporting events, whether by participating or cheering each other on as we won a football game or when the basketball team went to state.

We have also stood together in classes as we have faced those wonderful Friday tests in Contemporary World Problems, or joined forces to argue about a certain stock market activity.

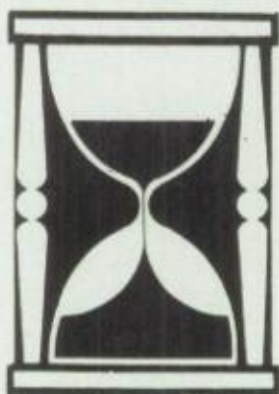

The teachers and administration have stood by us too. They have helped us straighten out scheduling problems. They have helped us with personal problems. They have even managed to teach us a thing or two, despite our loud protests.

Everyone complained loudly about U.S. History and all of those section surveys. "When will I ever use this in the future?" was commonly heard. I thought that, too, at first, but how many of you know what the Oklahoma Sooners are named after? I do.

GRADUATION NIGHT FINALLY ARRIVES.....

AND OUR CLASS SPEAKERS HAVE THEIR SAY!

This may seem like a very trivial thing to know, but these small things spark curiosity to learn greater things. And these greater things are what have started us on our way.

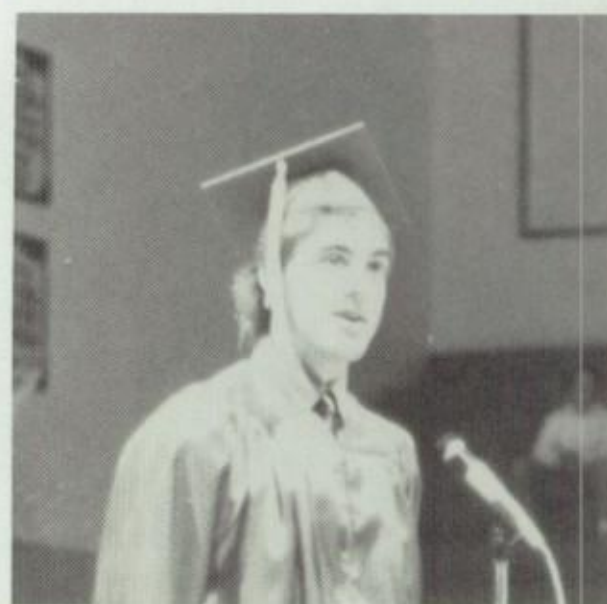

Leaving Ilwaco High will be both a sad and happy event, but it's a step we've got to take. For many of us, there will no longer be teachers and classmates to stand by us. We will not have the built-in support system that a school offers. I know that during my years of school I have learned that I will always need people to "stand by me."

I am thankful for the support that my class, my teachers and my community have shown to me, and from what I have seen in my classmates, I think they feel the same.

As we finish our high school careers and move on with our lives, we may not remember why Fiji was in an uproar last week, or what the word mufti means, but we will remember the friendships we have found and the support we have had from our friends, teachers and families.

This support and friendship will not end when we leave the halls of Ilwaco High School. We hope that in our future, our friends and families will be there for us when we need them.

"Stand By Me." It's such a small thing to ask, yet it means so much as we face the future.

I want to go back

By DENNIS MONTGOMERY
Class representative

As seniors, we are often asked, what advice would we give underclassmen. They also ask what we would do to change this school. We answer, of course, in light of our own experiences.

Some would say, "Get more involved," or "work harder during your freshman and sophomore years," or "show more respect to the seniors and teachers."

Perhaps the theme of this presentation is the question: Do underclassmen owe more respect to upperclassmen and teachers? The answer is—have the upperclassmen and teachers earned this respect?

Does the fact that we have been here, longer justify their automatic respect? What have we done in speech and action that would warrant the respect we say they owe us?

What about the teachers—it doesn't appear they are afforded the thanks or respect for a good job, and yes, some of them do a really good job, but what you generally hear are complaints and criticism.

If we, the Ilwaco High School Class of '87, were given the opportunity to go back and do things differently, we probably would, but it's too late for us.

Like most of you sitting here, our hindsight is far better than our foresight. However, it's not too late for those students following us to change—to make a real effort to take charge of their education and their lives in a more constructive way.

In this brief presentation, I may have raised more questions than I have answered, but you should know that this graduating class sincerely wants IHS to be a place adults, students and staff can respect and be proud of.

Make the world turn around

By DAVID MEAD
Faculty representative

I have a feeling that our generation is in for one heck of a good time. We are entering into a world that is advancing to new heights in every field, and the number of possible routes we can take with our lives is growing every day. The opportunities are there, waiting for us.

In global respect, each of us is very small: less than a five billionth of the significance of humanity each. How can we make the world turn around? How can we be an influence on the outcome of such an enormous crowd?

I think we can affect this pool of people quite a bit, each in our own way. It is not necessarily what we do, but how we do it.

As we each go into our new jobs, college or whatever, we will be meeting new people, making new friends, and having new experiences. In all this action we can have an amazingly good effect with those whom we interact.

All we have to do is appreciate where we are and look on the positive side of whatever is going on. This is making the world turn around. Just to stand up and push in the right direction, rather than dragging our feet or pushing the wrong way. We need to care about what is going on, and have an enthusiastic attitude that we can make a difference.

We are all in this boat of life together, and since we have to live together we might as well get along. There is that feeling to win over, defeat and dominate our comrades: that feeling of power.

But there is also a good feeling when we get along, as a team.

Let's combine these feelings and create a group that will support and look out for each other, and that will have the power to do anything and go anywhere.

Let's take such a team and use it not against another team of people, but against any of the many barriers and frontiers we will meet in our life.

Let's use it to help make the world turn around. To push in a group effort, where everyone is an important factor, and we can all feel accomplished in whatever we are doing.

I hope what I am saying to you does not strike you as "hopeless idealistic impossibilities," because if it does, then that is what it is. I don't want you to think that I am pressing for those college bound seniors only.

I feel, and truly believe, that no matter where we go or end up, there will be the opportunity for us to make the world turn around a little better.

Through our lives and actions, we can send a message that we want to live in a world of hope, freedom and peace. For every one who does this, we are pulling a little closer to that goal.

It may never be a goal that is obtained throughout humanity, but just by trying we will take a risk that will give us satisfaction and a reason for our lives.

True blue

By CAROLE BAKER
Class salutatorian

It is a great feeling here.

This seems to be one of those times in which we reflect upon the memories we hold of our school and especially of our true blue friends.

At one time or another all of us have taken a trip down memory lane. Perhaps we see an old photograph. This can trigger old emotions which may cause us to sink into the past. We may feel the urge to contact old friends and rekindle these relationships, even if the original friendship, way back when, was not very strong.

Many people feel that they are expected to renew old ties or continue old friendships. In doing this, they may lose touch with the present. They feel reassured by remembering times when they had more control over their destiny. They do not just want to turn the clock back. They want to set it at a time that they were happy and secure.

Thinking about memories can give a person a great feeling of continuity. Although it is perfectly normal to dip into the past, a preoccupation with what "could have been," may be hiding uncertainty and discontent about the present.

Quite often people are heard saying "If only I could do it over." In some instances this can be an addictive escape into fantasy which can prevent a person from enjoying or improving the present.

Although some individuals do have a desire to seek our former friends, perhaps they should stick to the true blue friends—the ones they really share something in common with.

After high school or college, almost everyone has curiosities to see how their former classmates turned out—that's why we have class reunions. Not only is this a sentimental journey, it is a way of answering questions we have about how everyone else has "turned out."

In some ways it is probably ridiculous to pass judgment on what any one person has done or failed to do. Life could have been better, but it also could have been worse.

Memories are the vehicles in which we make our visits to the past. I am sure that at this very moment a lot of us graduates are recalling some of our memories. These trips down memory lane are most likely harmless, as long as we don't get trapped in them.

After all, it is our past experiences that make us what we are today. But whether it was good or bad, the past has come and gone. The time has come when we must go on.

The world is constantly changing, and we must change right along with it. Each of us should feel proud of our accomplishments and of how far we have come. Maybe things have not worked out like we originally planned, but our life is still ours to live, to learn, to grow, to love.

WINNERS

School board member Ann Saari doled out the scholarships. One of those scholarships, presented by the Ocean Beach Parent Teacher Student Association (PTSA), was a first this year.

The initial PTSA scholarships of $500 each went to Jessica van Son and Gary Wirkkala.

The annual Marie Hamilton scholarship fund was down considerably from previous years, due to lower interest rates, and forced the school board to slice the number of applicants who would receive monies, according to Mrs. Saari.

The criterion used for awarding the Marie Hamilton scholarships are academic performance, citizenship, propensity to succeed in college, financial need and general worthiness. Miss Hamilton further stipulated that the number of scholarships would be restricted "so that each scholarship will be substantial in amount."

Marie Hamilton funds were given as follows: $2303.60 each to Carole Baker and Lonnie Williams, $1500 each to Susan Girard, Miss van Son, Michelle Marsh, and David Klump; and $1000 each to David Mead, Donna Aase, Laura Lindstrom, Wendi Andrew, Christy Mikkola, and Kim Kroll.

The annual Margaret Myers scholarships of $500 each to one boy and one girl went to Mead and Miss Aase.

Miss Marsh received the Josephine Markham Millam scholarship of $650, and Shari Hawkins was given the Roberta Pierson Memorial scholarship of $100.

High School Principal Juanita Marasko presented both class awards and academic awards.

Academic award winners were: Mead, National Presbyterian Scholarship and Presidential Academic Fitness Award (PAFA); Miss Aase, Presidential Scholarship for Whitworth College, and PAFA; Miss Baker, honors at entrance, President's Scholarship and University Scholarship for Pacific Lutheran University; and Misses Aase, Andrew, Baker, Marsh and van Son plus Mead, Washington State Honors Awards.

Class awards were: Michelle Marsh, Pep Club top point getter (more than 100 points more than the next closest person); Michael Sharp, Thespians; Williams, ASB presidential plaque, and athletic award; Miss van Son, choir; Craig Burger, John Philip Sousa Award for band; Leigh Anne Snow, Mary Ann Staudenraus Inspirational Award and athletic award; Robert Huddleston and Ken Whitfield, Sea Resources Awards; and Don Zuern, Marine Corps Distinguished Athlete Award.

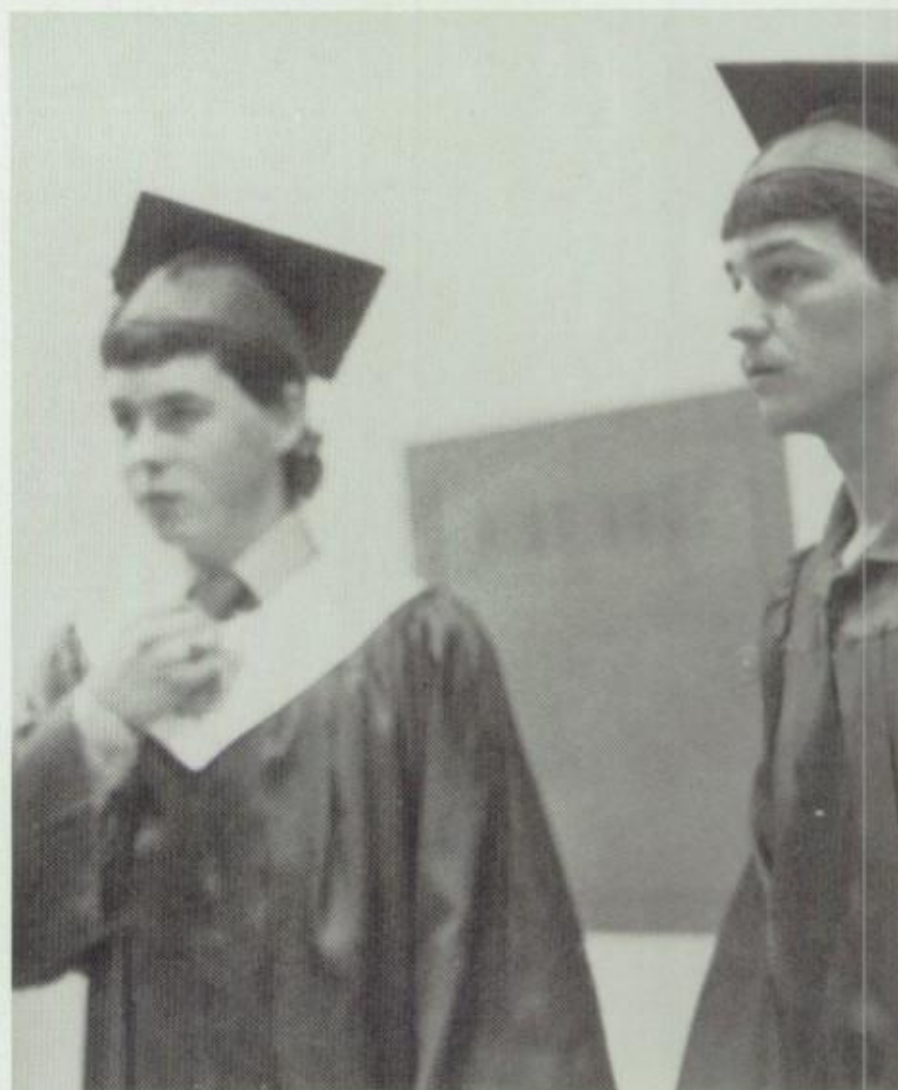

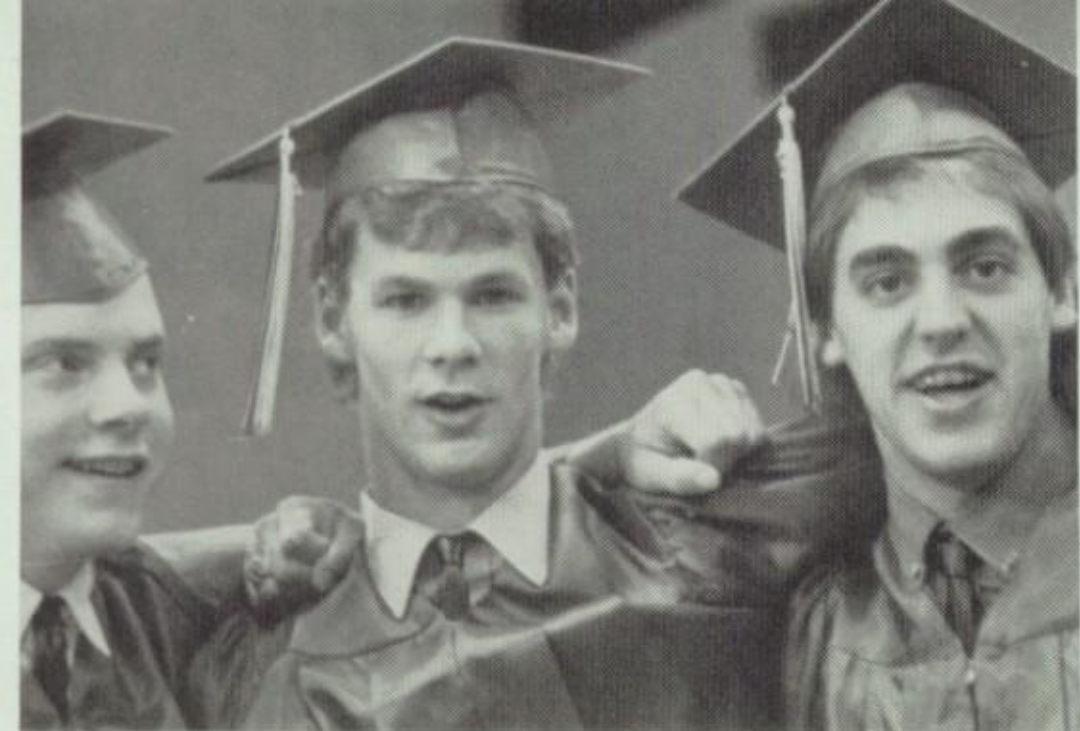

Mrs. Marasko also noted students entering the military are Aaron Luethe and Huddleston for the Air Force, Harrison for the Navy, Reggie Thompson for the Marines, and Whitfield and Troy Kotek for the Army.
